"Vegetarian Food" originally orose because of the oversion of the Buddhist religion to killing living creatures, and was a religious made of eating and drinking. During recent years, with the high advance of materialistic civilization, many of the so-colled "civilized diseases," are on the rise and threaten human lives Diseases such as artriosclerosis, high blood pressure, opoplexy heart disease, diobetes, concer, etc. ore all related closely in one way or another with food. Because of this and for the sake of health, the eating of vegetarian food has spread from day to day, regardless of whether they are young or old, and regardless of whether they are Asiatics or Westerners Vegetarian food is now no longer exclusive to Buddhist manks or nuns.

However, the bosic ingredients for vegetorian food ore limited, moking voriation of dishes difficult. The primory gool of our restourant is to show how to prepore delicious and tosty vegetorion food using the limited range of ingredients avoilable.

The ordinary mon-in-the-street, who is used to eating o meat and fish diet, has to be enticed to take vegetarian food. To promote and encourage the taking of vegetarian food, our restaurant tries, wherever possible, to use the names and form to which people who take meat and fish dishes are occustomed. This is being done, not with the intention of creating folse impressions, but to allow the people who are tasting vegetarian food for the first time, to have a sense of familiarity and to be psychologically prepared.

The specialty of the house, however, is strictly vegetarian dim sum, the only such in Philadelphia.

For a variety of reasons, my wife and I decided to take the Kingdom up on its opening special of alloyou can eat dim sum for $10. Normally, the nearly 40 selections rangs in price between $2.3 and $5.3 and the barg in wash and oblication of the control of the property of the proper

Thirty-six dim sum, 14 soups, 112 main dishes.

Weordered three dim sum. Then soup for two. My dining partner and I were deep into choosing a third main dish when our Kingdom of Vegetarians waiter could no longer contain

All three of the man dishes arrived with variations of the same orange slice and marachino cherry garmab.

We ordered our dim sum a la care, but had we wanted to dine exclusively on these small, savory dishes, $10 here buys all you can eat of the goodes.

The most intriguing of our dim sum samplings were the fired seawed rolls with dark wrapperstey looked for all the world like salmon skin - amound creamy tare of lilings.

A second dim sum -urged on us by out-helpful waiter - brought two each of decorative red, white and green steemed dumplings, all of which held the same simple but savory cabbage carrot-water-chestim mixture. Vegetarians call for high relative start of the same simple but savory cabbage carrot-water-chestim mixture. Vegetarians call too pancakes carved into small, kot wedges were every bit as fich and delicious as those other restaurants make with lard.

The restaurant strives to provide a serencyl elegant setting for its vegetarians. Even at lunch the tables were set with passel cloths and contessing naphus. Incense perfumes the cur. Heavy, ivory plastic chopsucks are provided at every place. Conventional metal flatware is available by request. Tea comes with the meal. Orange segments and fortune cookers are the free finale kere White or brown nee is available at extra coss.

Welcome
In 1754, Horace Walpoli Invented the word serendiply which he darhed from a Federal fully-falle called The Three Princes of Serendip.

According to Walpule, the three princes of this stury "were always making discoveries; by accidents and segacity, of things they were not in quest of".

Thus secondarly is "the faculty of making happy and unexpected discoveries by accident".

This is the splitt of the "Serendipity"
We hope you will find unexpected pleasures in our surprising entrees, wondrous diaks and specially desserts. This combined with our released atmosphere and segencies to please, will hopefully live you a "Secondipitous" experience with every visit.
